Val Pohl introduced his brother-in-law, Marty Slatta. John Ross introduced his guest, Jim Begg.

Leon Lubin introduced our guest speaker, James (Jim) Harley Marsh. After a national search, Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig brought Marsh to Edmonton in 1980 to be editor in chief of the Canadian Encyclopedia. There he drew up plans for Canada's first comprehensive encyclopedia since the 1950's and hired some 40 staff, 200 consultants and several thousand contributors. The ambitious project was completed on time and to great reviews and commercial success in September 1985.

His inspiration for the encyclopedia came from the Frenchman, Denis Diderot's Encyclopedia, or a Systematic Dictionary of the Sciences, Arts, and Crafts which was published between 1751 and 1772.

Jim Marsh indicated that his approach with the Canadian Encyclopedia was to present an authoritative, expert, fair and balanced reference document. His entire career as an author and editor has been to to act as a gatekeeper to ensure balance and correctness. The move to digital, made in 2001, means the Encyclopedia is available free to anyone with Internet access; it now receives more than eleven million unique visitors annually for 25 million-page views. The Encyclopedia contains more than 30,000 multimedia items including images, maps, games, audio and video.

The topic of Jim Marsh's presentation was "Truth, Lies and the Demise of Democracy"

The online community has become a mob. Emotion, not reason drives the media. Truth is now 'relative'. The vain hope that social media would overcome tyrants has not borne fruit. In the recent past democratic processes have disappeared in Egypt, Syria, Turkey, the Philippines and Venezuela.

There is a fine line between populism and demagoguery. Extreme populism preys on people's worst fears and often hidden emotions. Some demagogues have received up to 40% of the popular support but were rejected by the mainstream political parties. Examples in the United States are Senator Joseph McCarthy, a Republican Senator from Wisconsin who began his witch hunt against communists in the 1950's but was ultimately discredited and disappeared from public view. Democratic Governor George Wallace of Alabama strongly believed in "Segregation Now, Segregation Tomorrow and Segregation Forever". He twice ran for President as an Independent Candidate in 1968 and as a Democrat 1972. He was shot and paralyzed in the 1972 campaign but ultimately returned to state politics and served four terms a Governor. By 1979 he apologized for his views on segregation and appointed black citizens to his government.

Democracy is hard work! Negotiation, compromise, mutual toleration, forbearance, and accepting that others have the right to exist are essential elements for democracy to survive.

The disappearance of conservative Democrats and liberal Republicans has made a huge difference in the USA. If democracy fails in the United States it won't take long for it to fail in Canada.

How are we going to get out of this mess in Canada when Quebec would prefer to import oil from Saudi Arabia instead of from Western Canada? There is a wave of anti-establishment sentiment in Canada and around the world.

The Gate Keepers are gone!

Ken Korchinski thanked our speaker for a stimulating and thought-provoking presentation.

Mike Matei was the winner of the Free Lunch draw.

Drumheller is not only famous for Dinosaurs but has an equally important history of coal mining. The first load of coal shipped out of the valley was from a Newcastle mine in 1911 owned by Jesse Gouge and Garnet Coyle. The Drumheller coal rush really heated up after Samuel Drumheller bought land in the valley from Thomas Greentree and sold it to the Canadian National Railway to develop a townsite. A famous coin toss was made by Drumheller and Greentree to decide who would name the town. The coin fell in favour of Samuel Drumheller. Between 1911 and 1979, 139 mines were registered in the valley and over 56 million tons of coal was shipped across Canada. The Atlas Coal Mine was the last one to close in 1979 signaling the end of the coal mining era in the valley. The structure and the coal mining history are preserved at the original Atlas Coal Mine site at East Coulee.
